Record heat expected for today's 116th running of the Boston Marathon Emergency organizations urge runners to be cautious Remember that spectators are in danger, too

The record-breaking heat expected to test the mettle of elite runners in today's Boston Marathon is also prompting warnings by emergency organizations for the thousands of spectators.

"If you're just standing on a curb for hours in that hot sun you're just going to bake," said Jennifer Mehigan, a spokeswoman for Boston EMS. "Take breaks from the sun."

Besides the thousands of runners expected to run 26.2 miles today, there will be even more spectators lining the route from Hopkinton to Boston, and you don't have to be a runner to suffer negative effects from the temperatures.

Many of those spectators enjoy their day off by drinking at outdoor house parties or at bars that have prime real estate along Boylston Street.

But officials said that water should be the drink of choice today.

Kat Powers, a spokeswoman for the American Red Cross of Eastern Massachusetts, said spectators should use common sense and heed advice "your mom told you."

"Stay hydrated, dress for the heat and please wear sunblock or a broad-rimmed hat," Powers said. "And have a buddy and keep an eye on each other and know the signs of a heat-related emergency."

Powers said Red Cross volunteers and personnel will be manning 24 first aid stations along the route for both runners and spectators. There will be one about every mile.

For the runners who become severely overheated, the stations will have immersion baths that are basically ice water to help cool a person's body temperature.

Mehigan said Boston EMS will have about 100 workers on hand for the race either at strategically placed ambulances or on bicycles riding along the route.

"One thing you can never really plan on in Boston is the weather," Mehigan said. "Every year it's different and it even changes through out the day."

Warning for the runners

BOSTON. With record-breaking temperatures expected for Greater Boston, Boston Marathon officials urged some runners to skip this year's race.

"We are now making the recommendation that if you are not highly fit or if you have any underlying medical conditions (for example — cardiac disease, pulmonary disease or any of a number of medical problems), you should NOT run this race," the marathon's medical directors said in an advisory.

Runners who are considered official entrants can skip this year's race and be deferred to the 2013 marathon. METRO

Sen. Scott Brown, wife unhurt in car crash

DEDHAM. A pizza delivery driver was cited for crashing into a car carrying Sen. Scott Brown and his wife.

Brown and his wife, former WCVB reporter Gail Huff, were not hurt in Friday's crash in Dedham, according to the Globe. An aide was driving the couple to a fundraiser, which they eventually made it to.

The driver from Dedham House of Pizza allegedly pulled out from a side street without slowing down. The driver was cited by Dedham police for failure to yield.

The impact from the 8:30 p.m. crash near Sprague and Alden streets forced the car Brown was in to hit a telephone pole.

Alleged T tunnel tagger arrested

A Boston man was arrested over the weekend for allegedly spray-painting the words "Hot," "Sauce," and "Love" inside an MBTA underground tunnel.

Transit Police arrested Alex Wan, 23, and charged him with malicious defacing of property and walking on railroad property.

According to Transit Police reports, officers from Northeastern University saw Wan exiting the Green Line tunnel, along the tracks, near Huntington and Massachusetts avenues.

When stopped by officers from the university, Wan said he was just going home, according to reports.

When Transit police arrived to speak to Wan, they noticed black and white paint on both of his hands and fingertips, police said.

▶ Wan

Two officers walked into the tunnel where Wan was coming from and found red graffiti on the left side that stretched approximately 50-75 feet in length. In the stretch of graffiti there was the word "HOT" in red lettering.

According to police, further down, the word "SAUCE" was written.

On the opposite side of the tunnel the word "HOT" with black bubble lettering was filled in with silver paint, according to police.

On the right side of the tunnel next to the word "HOT" was the word "LOVE" written with red paint, which was "tacky to the touch and had a strong odor of paint emanating from the wall," according to reports.

Wan was arrested, and when officers searched his bag they allegedly found work gloves, colored shoe polish, a bandanna, markers and multiple cans of spray paint.

Bulger hearing scheduled for Wednesday

BOSTON. Lawyers for alleged mobster James "Whitey" Bulger are still seeking items from federal prosecutors to prepare for his November trial on charges of racketeering and 19 murders, according to a court filing.

A hearing to discuss the status of the case is scheduled for Wednesday.

In a Friday filing, Bulger's lawyers said they have not yet received all trial and plea transcripts from related cases and a preliminary list of evidence that prosecutors plan to use as exhibits, among other items. His lawyers have repeatedly complained that prosecutors turned over mountains of evidence in a disorganized fashion, making it difficult for defense counsel to prepare. GLOBE

Boston Marathon: Celebrity runners

BOSTON. As a spectator, you wouldn't know most of the tens of thousands of runners who jog past you as you watch the Boston Marathon.

But every year there are a handful of faces that may look familiar.

That's because the race not only attracts elite runners from across the world; it also attracts celebrities.

Actor Will Farrell ran the race in 2003 in an impressive time of just under four hours.

He's not running it this year, according to Metro's research, but at right we share just a few of the minor celebrities that have signed up to run the 2012 Boston Marathon.

Local fashionista's tips on running race in style

This year's Boston Marathon is going to be a scorcher, so it is important to dress appropriately while looking good.

That's why local fashionista Dani Incropera, a senior marketer at Rue La La, has put together some tips for those attending the event.

Incropera will be hitting the streets herself to take part in the 26.2 mile trek from Hopkinton to the Hub representing "Team Red Cross" and the American Red Cross of Eastern Massachusetts, so Metro asked her how she plans on completing the tumultuous task — in high style.

You don't have to look like grandma when you race!

What's your own personal fashion when you run?
My personal fashion ... is reflected first in my attitude and then my apparel. If I feel confident, strong, and excited to take on any training route, I am more apt to hit the road in better style.
For this marathon I am wearing a black head band that says "FOCUS" in capital letters with a sequined red bow in my pony tail to represent the American Red Cross.

What are some suggestions or tips you can give other runners on what to wear?
Wear something that makes you feel secure, confident and proud. You don't want to be thinking that bystanders are looking at your butt jiggle or your tummy sticking out. Cover up what bounces, bobs or flops.

Carry or wear a piece with meaning. When you are feeling pain, or having doubts of finishing the race, this piece will give you the strength you need to never stop and never quit. It will remind you to push through until you cross the finish line.

Do not put fashion before comfort. If something is rubbing, chaffing, falling down, rising up, twisting or slipping, do not wear it.

‘Spring offensive’ by Taliban rattles Kabul

Heavy explosions, rockets and gunfire rattled Kabul yesterday as Afghanistan's Taliban launched a “spring offensive” with multiple attacks targeting Western embassies, the NATO force's headquarters and the parliament building.

The assault, one of the most serious on the capital since U.S.-backed Afghan forces removed the Taliban from power in 2001, highlighted the ability of militants to strike the heavily guarded diplomatic zone even after more than 10 years of war.

“These attacks are the beginning of the spring offensive and we had planned them for months.”
TALIBAN SPOKESMAN ZABIHULLAH MUJAHID

It was also another election-year setback in Afghanistan for U.S. President Barack Obama, who wants to present the long campaign against the Taliban as a success before the departure of most foreign combat troops by the end of 2014.

“These attacks are the beginning of the spring offensive and we had planned them for months,” Taliban spokesman Zabihullah Mujahid told Reuters.

He said the onslaught was revenge for a series of incidents involving American troops in Afghanistan — including the burning of Korans at a NATO base and the massacre of 17 civilians by a U.S. soldier. REUTERS

Atlantic tribute to dead of the Titanic

At the shrill sound of a ship's whistle in the North Atlantic, relatives of some of the more than 1,500 people who died when the Titanic sank after hitting an iceberg remembered their ancestors in a poignant ceremony a century later.

On a still, starry night and with little glare from the moon, the memorial cruise ship MS Balmoral floated above the wreckage of the famous ‘unsinkable’ luxury liner precisely 100 years to the day it foundered.

“At 2:20 a.m. all was quiet, as it would have been 100 years ago when it went deathly quiet, when the screaming stopped,” British Titanic historian Philip Littlejohn told Reuters yesterday. Littlejohn's grandfather, Alexander Littlejohn, was a 1st class steward in charge of lifeboat 13 when the ship began to go down.

About 700 people were rescued that night, including his grandfather, but there were too few lifeboats to save the rest. REUTERS

BRAYDEN SIMMS

POLITICAL WORLDLINESS FOR AN IMPOLITE WORLD

@METROPOLITIK

For complaints, suggestions and digital attaboys, e-mail us at brayden.simms@metro.us.

After a week in which Republicans turned Democrats' rhetorical "War on Women" around on them by shifting the debate from the right-wing's ubiquitous anti-women policies into a battle over lefties' alleged disdain for working mothers, we thought maybe this election battle had played itself out.

We weren't the only ones. Slate's Dave Weigel called it for the talking point: "The 'War on Women' is over," he wrote. (Online, at least, women appeared thankful for that.) The Washington Post was less jury, more judge: "Dear media: Stop playing along with fake controversies," they instructed.

It's almost as if they'd never been through a presidential campaign before!

Alas, neither side of this fracas was inclined to obey the orders. Yes, much like our other legacy entanglements — think: War on Terror, War on Drugs, War in Afghanistan — this so-called war seems intent on playing itself out indefinitely.

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner went on ABC yesterday to attack Mitt Romney's argument that the president's economic policies have unfairly affected women. "It's a ridiculous argument," he said. "It's been largely debunked."

See, Romney keeps saying that "92.3 percent of the job losses during the Obama years have been women." This is sort of true, but also not at all: While many have lost their jobs in the recession, Obama's stimulus saved many more. And while Republicans oppose any and all stimulus, more government spending could have saved still more. (And if it's true that the government reaction to the 2008 mortgage crisis spawned "The Obama Great Failed Recovery," as conservative blog Legal Insurrection and many others allege, what was the GOP counteroption? Tax cuts for the rich? Deregulation? Would those help women?)

Even Fox News Sunday saw a discrepancy in the Romney claim. Host Chris Wallace called the figure a "little bit of an accounting trick," saying "all the independent fact-finders have said it's misleading." Romney adviser Ed Gillespie shot back: Those were "liberal economists."

The big get in the mommy skirmishes came this weekend from NBC's Chris Hayes, who found video of Romney arguing in January that poor stay-at-home moms ought to get a job so they can "have the dignity of work." This paints a telling contrast from the campaign's manufactured outrage after unaffiliated Democrat operative Hilary Rosen said Ann Romney had not "worked a day in her life." The Romney camp mobilized, using the incident to paint Dems as anti-mom; Romney adviser Eric Fehrnstrom called it the "'kill Ann' strategy."

So which is it, Romneys? Is "stay-at-home mom" a respectful signifier? Or does it imply a lack of dignity?

Our moms are waiting.

Diddy's uninvited houseguest

A 30-year-old man has been arrested for trespassing at Sean "Diddy" Combs' East Hampton mansion, where he reportedly ate the hip-hop mogul's food, drank his liquor, tried on some of his clothes and then slept in his bed, according to TMZ.com. Quamine Taylor, who reportedly has a history of mental illness, entered the vacant house through an unlocked basement door and was there for 24 hours before tripping an alarm. But when police and an alarm company representative showed up, Taylor was able to convince them he had permission to be there. It wasn't until a caretaker arrived and called the police back that Taylor was arrested. Combs' rep had no comment.

Poor Quamine. If only someone had tipped him off that Combs' mansion was NOT a Notorious B&B, he wouldn't be in this mess.

Jesus, take the wheel (not you, Bynes)

If someone isn't going to get Amanda Bynes some help, can somebody at least get the girl a driver? Less than two weeks after being arrested for driving under the influence after hitting up the L.A. club scene, the Nickelodeon star was back out partying — and behind the wheel, according to TMZ. The actress was spotted driving to the Chateau Marmont and nightclub Greystone Manor, where she was spotted texting behind the wheel before backing her car up onto a curb. On the bright side, a curb is a downgrade from a cop car — which is the last thing she ran her car into.

Pitt and Jolie are engaged

After being together for seven years, raising six children and being featured on a bazillion tabloid magazine covers, Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie are engaged to be married, a rep for Pitt confirms in a statement.

"Yes, it's confirmed. It is a promise for the future and their kids are very happy. There's no date set at this time," the rep says. Pitt reportedly popped the question with a $250,000 ring, according to Us Weekly.

Talking points

Scarlett Johansson on 'horrible' divorce

Though she describes her split from ex-husband Ryan Reynolds as "comically amicable," Scarlett Johansson admits she's still reeling from her divorce. "Of course it's horrible. It was devastating. It really throws you," she tells Vogue. "You think that your life is going to be one way, and then, for various reasons or whatever, it doesn't work out." Johansson also acknowledges her post-divorce relationship with Sean Penn for the first time, saying, "We spent time together, yeah. I never put a title on it, really, but we were seeing each other."

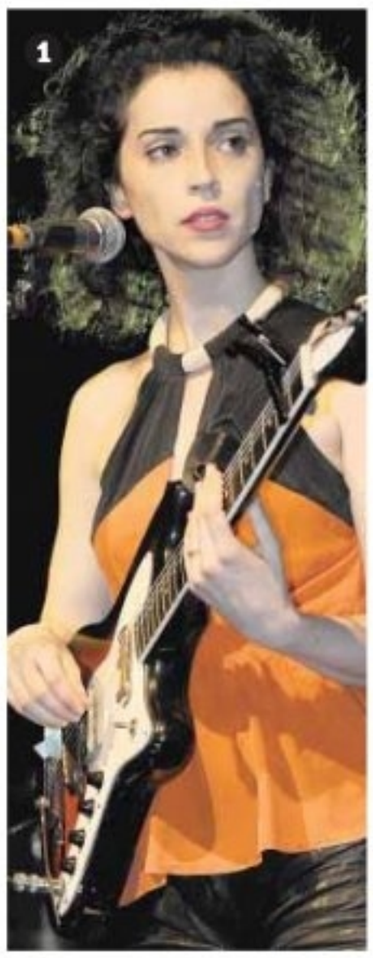
▶ Divorcee Johansson

Smith responds to divorce rumors

Jada Pinkett Smith isn't bothered by the tabloid reports of trouble in her marriage to Will Smith — or at least she isn't surprised by them. "Every year, one celebrity couple is under the microscope. This year, unluckily, it's us. I almost want to say that we should have been expecting it," she tells Gala magazine. "Will and I know the truth. We're waiting peacefully for the storm to blow over."

Tebow is still celibate (maybe)

Eligible bachelor and NFL quarterback Tim Tebow has been linked to a number of famous women in the press, from Taylor Swift to Katy Perry, but he's not bothered by the gossip. "It's funny, because half the rumors, I've never even met the people," he tells "Good Morning America." "I'm sure they would be lovely."



Big weekend in music with Coachella and Rock and Roll Hall of Fame

1: How is it possible that St. Vincent singer and guitarist Annie Clark can be be both smokin' hot and totally cool? The leather pants may have something to do with it — but if we knew the real answer, we'd all be rock stars, wouldn't we? St. Vincent played the second night at the Coachella Valley Music and Arts Festival in Indio, Calif., on Saturday.

2: Thom Yorke, on the other hand, proves you don't have to look cool to be cool. Does he not look a little like Brick from that show, "The Middle"? Radiohead headlined night two of Coachella.

3: From left, Faces and Rolling Stones guitarist Ron Wood plays; Funkadelic kingpin George Clinton sings; Flea, Anthony Keidis and Chad Smith of Red Hot Chili Peppers do their thang; and Slash from Guns N' Roses shreds. What could this group possibly be playing? Stevie Wonder's "Higher Ground," of course, at the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame all-star jam, where RHCP, GnR and the Faces were all inducted this weekend. And no, Axl Rose did not show up.

4: Azealia Banks was the very first performer announced to play Coachella, and she delivered an intense daytime set that included a cover of "Firestarter" by The Prodigy. classic hip-hop trio.

5: And in the "we didn't know who you were before, but you now have our attention" category, rapper Jay Rock got vertical during his Friday Coachella set. And yes, he did land the flip.

Marathon runner has mind-'joggling' talent

Participant will go the distance while juggling bean bags ◗ UNH senior is practicing to break a world record in May ◗ His second year at event

The expectation of the overbearing heat and the struggle at Heartbreak Hill are enough to worry about for most participants during the Boston Marathon.

But University of New Hampshire student Thomas Gounley wanted to add to the excitement and throw some juggling into the mix.

For the entire 26.2-mile run, Gounley will attempt to keep three bean-bags afloat during his stride to the finish line.

Known as "joggling," running while jogging, Gounley said Monday's Marathon challenge is just practice for a bigger event.

"I decided to train for the fastest time to joggle 50 miles. Currently it's eight hours, 23 minutes, which I'm attempting to break in May," he said.

About a year and a half ago, Gounley stumbled upon a list of bizarre Guinness World Records. Joggling was one of them.

Using juggling skills he picked up in middle school, matched with his endurance to run races in college, Gounley thought breaking the joggling record was something he could do.

"I ran Boston last year, so figured I may as well juggle the marathon as a training run and a little publicity, I guess," admitted Gounley.

If he drops the bags while running, Gounley will pick up again and carry on, he said.

And as for the awkward glances and chatter he's sure to attract along his trek, Gounley doesn't mind.

"People think it's a little ridiculous. But that's fine — it's an inherently ridiculous sport and I'm fine with that," he said.

WRITE TO METRO:

Playing hashtag games

While he is running, Gounley will be shirtless with the words #MeatHouseJoggler scrawled across his chest.

Gounley, who is sponsored by the Meat House, said this will allow bystanders to interact and track his location along the route as he attempts to make it to the finish line.

"People do tweet about the odd guy in the race — and given Boston's social media [savvy], there is no better way to test it out. It'll be a bit of social media experiment," he said. "I'm surprised no one has run a marathon while wearing a hashtag."

Runners to watch in the 2012 Boston Marathon

Geoffrey Mutai

Mutai set the marathon record last year in Boston by running (and winning) it in 2:03:02. The 2010 winner, Robert Kiprono Cheruiyot, has withdrawn with an "undisclosed injury" which should make it even easier for Mutai. A Kenyan has won the Boston Marathon 18 of the last 21 times, and Monday should make it 19 of the last 22 unless Ethiopia has a say. Running in the heat certainly won't be an issue for runners of either country.

The Americans

Because of the 2012 Summer Olympics, a few prominent American runners aren't taking part in the Boston Marathon this year. Ryan Hall, last year's fourth-place finisher in the Boston Marathon and fastest American marathoner is one of those players. But there are a couple of Americans worth noting that will be rocking the red, white and blue. Jason Hartman and Nicholas Arciniaga are the two biggest American names in this year's race. They qualified for the marathon by running it in 2:11:06, and 2:11:30, respectively.

Caroline Kilel

Kenyan Caroline Kilel is the defending champ, having beaten American Desiree Davila by two seconds in a thrilling finish at last year's Boston Marathon. But like the men's race, the women's race is missing some key racers due to the Olympics, including Davila.

Gebregziabher Gebremariam

Gebremariam won the ING New York City Marathon in 2010 with a time of 2:08:13. He ran the Manhattan jaunt even faster last fall, but finished fourth. Gebremariam will also be attempting to land a spot on the Ethopian Olympic team today.

Other notables:

- Tadese Tola, Ethiopia
- Levy Matebo, Kenya
- Wilson Chebet, Kenya

Places to watch

Wellesley College, Wellesley. The excitement from the college crowd, many offering runners a kiss, is contagious at the halfway mark.

Heartbreak Hill, Newton. There's no shortage of pained expressions as runners push uphill. They'll need all the shouts of support they can get.

Coolidge Corner, Brookline. There are crowds, but not as crazy as the spots downtown, as well as a variety of good bars and restaurants.

Boylston Street, Boston. If you don't mind the crowds and you're an early riser, watching from Boylston as the runners turn the corner for the final stretch is one of the best places to be.

Party on Marathon Monday with class, or the class of 2012

Patriot's Day, synonymous in most Bostonians' mind with the Boston Marathon, gives those who aren't ambitious enough to run 26.2 miles an opportunity to explore ... and day drink.

To take full advantage of the party atmosphere, go where the college kids are.

At the halfway point of the race, Wellesley Square offers a noisy environment full of screaming Wellesley College coeds.

Then, follow the runners to Chestnut Hill, where legendary Heartbreak Hill inspires, or tires, runners as they head towards Boston. You'll find even rowdier crowds of Boston College students there, and more than a few college kids starting their 'happy hour' early.

For those who want a more relaxed marathon experience a bit off the beaten path, the Beacon Hill Bistro, a refined French bistro on 25 Charles St., is hosting a Marathon Monday Brunch from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Or you could head over to The Beehive, a trendy spot on 541 Tremont St. in the South End, for a modern, artsy take on the holiday.

To fully experience the marathon action, head down to Kenmore Square in the afternoon to watch a throng of marathon runners, fans and crowds from the Patriot's Day Red Sox game intersect.

For an upscale view of the madness, grab a cocktail at Eastern Standard on 528 Commonwealth Ave. and watch from their patio.

Finally, finish off the afternoon with the runners in a packed Copley Square and enjoy yourself in the postrun festivities at Post 390 on 406 Stuart St. with a healthy meal of bacon mac and cheese and beer. CHRIS LEO PALERMINO

Understanding Effie Trinket

How actress Elizabeth Banks sees one of the most colorful, reviled characters of 'The Hunger Games'
Why she wants you to stop watching 'Jersey Shore'

As Effie Trinket, the escort who preps the kids for "The Hunger Games," Elizabeth Banks is nearly unrecognizable behind thick makeup and some ridiculous hair and hats. The plucky villainess talks to Metro about the film's similarities to reality TV, and her thoughts on "Jersey Shore."

There's more to Effie than just being a pink-haired villain. As a career woman, she doesn't have the best gig.

No, District 12 is terrible. To me, Effie drank the Kool-Aid. She's on board because she's in the 1 percent and she doesn't want to give that up. I think she thinks, "Revolution would be bad. People will die and I might lose my cupcakes." She's not one for change. She likes the status quo. I think she shows up in District 12 disgusted, thinks that it's dirty, wants to go home as fast as possible. I think of PR people and stylists I've worked with who go, "Well, I'll make the best of a bad situation," you know? And I think that's Effie. The main thing about Effie is she's superselfish. It's all about her.

But she's also thrilled to show off the finer things in life to the kids.

I think Effie's main thing is she's ultimately a very optimistic and effervescent, theatrical person. That's why she has the job that she has, because she's spinning the job she has positively all the time. They're most likely going to die, and she's seen a lot of kids die. So in her mind it's like, "You won a lottery ticket. We're all going to die, but you're going to go out famous, with a big bang!" That's Effie's attitude about these kids. They're almost definitely going to die, she's pretty sure of it. But they just won a ticket to a great reality show.

The book and the movie do a great job of satirizing that aspect of our culture — reality TV. I don't know how much reality TV you watch ...

I don't mind the competition shows where people actually have a talent that they bring to bear on something, like "Project Runway," the chef ones, "Idol," "Voice," "The X Factor." But the message that we reward bad behavior — I personally don't believe that the 15 minutes of fame is worth your dignity. And I think there are a few people that come to them with something to offer the world, and that's a little bit more interesting. But I don't watch "Jersey Shore." I know people go, "I watch it because it's so crazy. I would never do that." But you're watching it and you're giving them ratings. You're rewarding them by watching it.

▶ If you want a real hands-on approach, you need to try acupressure.

STOCKBYTE

Take your massage to the next level

◗ Acupressure can help heal headaches, tension and fatigue ◗ Bring balance to your body and mind ◗ This hands-on approach is all about working energy pathways

Acupressure is more than a massage — much more.

Based on Asian medicine, acupressure heals the body through various hands-on techniques and movements, which stretch and manipulate the body depending on an individual's condition.

There are a number of energy pathways, known as meridians, that go through the body internally, working to strengthen the functions of organs, the mind and skin, says Susan Krieger, a New York expert in Chinese Medicine.

The hands-on techniques can focus on where the problem is, such as the shoulders, but also center on points that can help release tension, such as the legs and feet.

By working through the energy pathways, acupressure releases endorphins in the brain.

"Endorphins are responsible for the calming effect," Krieger says.

Acupressure is based on the information the body gives to the practitioner, but Krieger also says that a practitioner won't just immediately treat patients without talking to them first. A practitioner will talk to the patients, examine their face and take their pulse.

"I always talk to [patients]," she says. "I want to hear from them."

Acupressure is for people of all ages and in all stages of health.

Krieger recommends the treatment to anyone who needs to find a change and who is willing to take the time to do some healing for themselves.

"Acupressure is all about bringing balance to body and mind," Krieger says.

Inside JOB

The revamped Occupational Outlook Handbook website provides detailed info on hundreds of careers
Which fields look promising

BRAND X PICTURES

▶ Looking for a new industry? Do some research first at www.bls.gov/ooh.

The best source of information for people researching careers is now even better, with a more informative and easier-to-use website.

The Occupational Outlook Handbook, online at www.bls.gov/ooh, provides detailed information on hundreds of careers. That includes a description of each job and its work environment.

Jennifer Flynn, the assistant director of career services at Philadelphia University, relies on the handbook to help students identify potential career paths. She's enthusiastic about the updates. "It looks great," she explains. "It's easier for explorers to pop in and look around, and the search function is much better."

You can now search by salaries, educational requirements, on-the-job training, projected number of new jobs and projected rate of growth — either singly or in combination. So, for instance, if you search for jobs you can get with an associate's degree that pay $25,000 to $34,999, your results will turn up five jobs, two of them with solid growth rates (preschool teachers and veterinary technicians).

One of the new features Flynn especially likes is the "similar occupations" tab for each entry. For instance, the veterinary technician's description gives six other jobs working either with animals or in labs. "This will help people explore their options," she says, whether it's a college student picking a major or an adult looking to change careers.

Job security

According to the handbook, these fields are projecting the fastest rates of growth between 2010-2020:

- Personal care aides: 70 percent
- Home health aides: 69 percent
- Biomedical engineers: 62 percent
- Helpers, brick, stone, tile: 60 percent
- Helpers, carpenters: 56 percent
- Veterinary technicians: 52 percent
- Rebar workers: 49 percent
- Physical therapist assistants: 46 percent
- Helpers, plumbers and pipe-fitters: 45 percent

GOODSHOOT

▶ Work it, girl: Looking for a new gig should keep you full-time busy.

For a faster job search, a few things not to do

Though many have mastered the art of quick consumerism via same-day shipping and doorstep delivery, we still struggle with expedited job shopping. In her new book, "Same-Day Résumé," career expert Louise Kursmark offers valuable advice on minimizing time in the workless waiting room. "The key to speeding up the process is in nontraditional job search techniques," says the author.

According to Kursmark, the best catalyst strategies involve do-nots rather than dos:

Do not be a cyber scavenger
"Not everything's on the Web. In fact, most employers would rather not post a job online, because they'll have to look over hundreds and hundreds of résumés and potential interviewees. They would rather ask around — staff, family, friends, business colleagues."

Do not make an appearance
"You want to maximize your resources, one of which is time. In-person soliciting is very time consuming and usually doesn't produce high payoffs unless your visit is specific and purposeful."

Do not count on your current circle
"Expand your network and look into professional associations. You can make great contacts through these associations to establish who you are in the field and find others in your profession. If they know of jobs, they're going to steer you in the direction of companies that are hiring."

Do not slack off
"If you're not currently working, your search should be a full-time job. Even if you're in the interviewing process, you need to continue networking efforts, résumé polishing and industry research."

TIFFANY KANG

Keep it positive!

Despite the job market, Kursmark emphasizes the importance of staying optimistic about your prospects.

▶ "Though the unemployment rate is high and college grads aren't finding opportunities, realize that 91 percent of people are still working. There are jobs for dedicated, smart people — you only need one among thousands of opportunities. Feel good about what you have to offer."

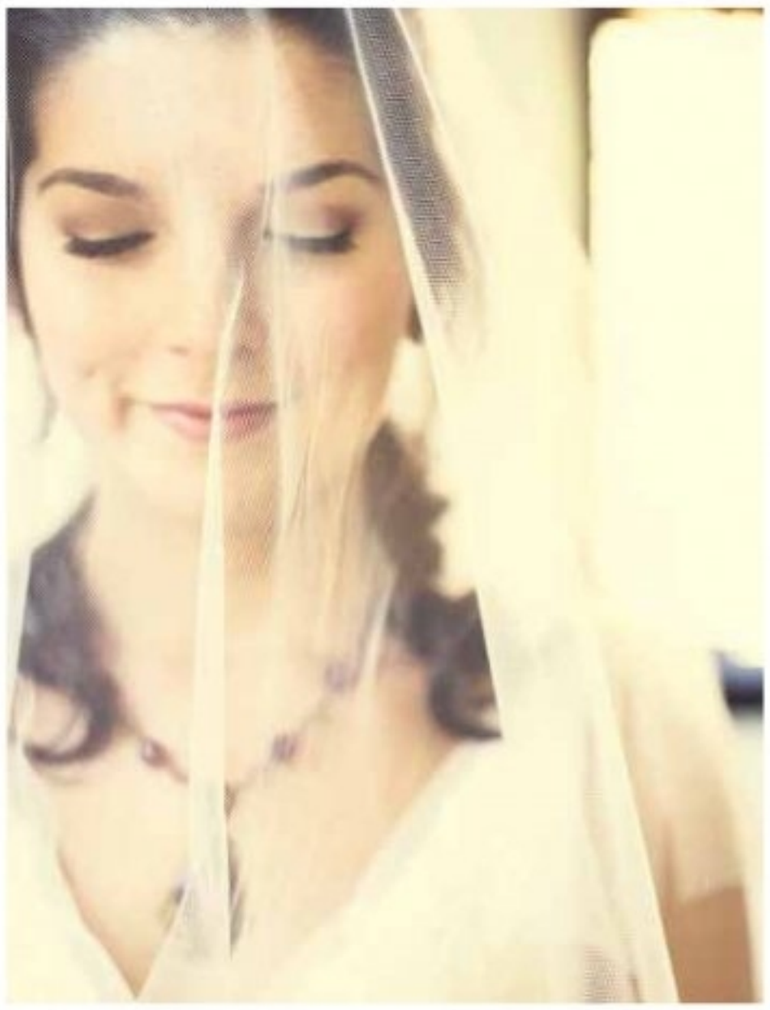
Photo op: Getting your start in the wedding industry

▶ Wedding photography can be a lucrative part-time gig or a full-time business ▶ Pros tell us how to break in and what it takes to be a success



CASSANDRA ELDRIDGE

▶ Cassandra Eldridge's shoots range from $3,000 to $5,800.

Samuel Bendall works 9 to 5 as an assistant account manager for an L.A.-based PR firm. But over the last five years, he has created a rewarding — and even lucrative — part-time career as a wedding photographer.

Bendall, a recent California State-Northridge grad, books about one wedding per month and grosses between $1,500 and $6,000 for each one (a fairly industry-standard rate). The work is certainly more rewarding than his former part-time jobs in the restaurant business, but building a viable wedding photography business is far more challenging than most people realize.

"I don't do it full-time because of how much work is involved in a wedding. It's hard to convey to people," he explains. "It's more logistics than anything: meeting with the family, the wedding planner. Plus, there's a lot on the back end of processing and packaging good images. You spend about 10 percent of your time actually at the wedding."

And, unlike other part-time jobs, wedding photography requires both passion and talent. Bendall has been a photographer since high school and avidly pursues his own artistic photo projects.

But, perhaps most importantly, the job demands an intrinsic feel for public relations.

"You can't just be a good photographer, you have to be an incredible interpersonal communicator: Explain concisely, to difficult people, what exactly you're doing," says Bendall. "It's like Oscar Wilde said: 'If you want to tell people the truth, make them laugh, otherwise they'll kill you.'"

Blog inspiration

Married couple Justin and Mary Marantz own one of the premier wedding photography businesses in the country, based in New Haven, Conn. Their blog, "Pancake Session," is full of wisdom, resources and inspiration for budding wedding photographers: www.justinmarantz.com.

Expert Q&A

▶ How do you know if you have the talent for the job?
A lot of people think that if they own a camera, they're a photographer. But there's obviously composition, thinking outside the box and timing — developing really good gut instincts. If you're interested, [then] practice, practice, practice and see where you wind up. There are a lot of wedding photographers out there who are extremely talented. It's important not to compare.

▶ How much do you charge per wedding?
Between $3,000 and $5,800.

▶ Do you hire assistants?
Yes, one per shoot. I pay a flat rate of $200 and encourage them to build their own portfolio. That's how most people break in.

▶ How do you find your clients?
Word of mouth has been amazing. I'm a heavy blogger, and I'm very active on social networking.

Tax cuts on rich don't help the poor

Most people believe that if President Obama taxes the rich for more money, it will go to the poor. This couldn't be further from the truth. If hold-up men take your money, the hold-up men use it. If it is given to a charity, it is used by the charity. If the government takes it, the politicians will use it for their pork barrels. Raising taxes on the rich does not help the poor.

The war on moms keeps on going

RE: "UMBRAGE WARS BEGIN IN EARNEST": You make it sound like Mrs. Romney has just floated through life on a gilded pillow. You might be forgetting the fact that she is diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis, and regardless of whether she suffers publicly from any outwardly visible symptoms, imagine yourself going through life with the fear of possible physical, psychological or neurological debilitation. I think raising five kids while keeping herself in good health is a pretty phenomenal accomplishment.
DEBORAH FENKER, VIA E-MAIL

Mitt Romney has won a big victory in the inside-the-Beltway game. He has no chance of passing himself off as anything but a scion of vast wealth. But apparently he's free to lie about his wife and say that she has personal experience of kitchen-table economic issues. The punditry has decided that calling him on it is an attack on his wife, and therefore not only is the entire GOP "War on Women" disqualified from consideration but Romney himself is now Joe Sixpack-by-proxy. Let's hope the voters are smarter than the insiders.
DAN WYLIE-SEARS, BRIGHTON

President Obama took time away from the 99 percent to defend the .000001 percent of women who can afford to choose to stay home to do whatever they do when they have five children and a husband who makes a lot of money with other people's money killing other people's jobs. SUZY SANDOR, VIA E-MAIL

Mr. Brayden Simms is again doing damage control for his heroes, the Obamas and the Democratic party. Ms. Rosen said that Ms. Romney actually never worked a day in her life as a stay-at-home mom. This statement started a firestorm, which prompted Simms to state that Hilary Rosen, a "Democratic Strategist," is not affiliated with Obama. I don't know why, she only visited the Obama White House 35 times. I guess Mr. Simms has taken writing lessons from "Calvin & Hobbes": As Calvin put it, "the purpose of writing is to inflate weak ideas, obscure poor reasoning and inhibit clarity."
IGOR MANNIKUS, VIA E-MAIL

I think Ann Romney is right. Women's decisions should be respected, in all areas. She, and all women, must have the right to make their own life choices. It's a shame her party and her husband don't think so.
PAUL SIMONS, VIA E-MAIL

Ann Romney worked hard raising her five children. Hillary Rosen was incorrect saying she hadn't worked a day in her life. As a result, it seems Ann Romney's maids and butlers didn't work a day in their lives.

Horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. You may enter the day with high hopes — but unless something good happens to help you keep that positive attitude, the slightest upset will send you into a funk.
♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Upon occasion, you're apt to ignore those who have done the most for you while rewarding the undeserving in hopes of getting their attention. This approach will do nothing for you.
♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. In order to get others to do your bidding, you might try to use some flattery. However, if the recipient doesn't deserve your words of praise, you'll get nowhere. Sincerity will have the greatest impact.
♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you run into someone who can help you in your career, the use of levity could prove counterproductive. Keep your conversation on a serious plane.
♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. You'll be of no help if you tell an advice-seeker only what she or he wants to hear. You'll do more for the other party if you are frank and forthright.
♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Even if the truth is painful, base your judgment calls on facts. Decisions based on easy outs might make you feel good — but if they do nothing for you, they're worthless.
♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Don't think it won't anger your friends if you give them cause to think you're nice only to those who can help you get what you want. Treat everyone with the same courtesy.
♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Even if members of the opposite sex usually find you quite appealing, don't mistake the signals and think someone is making a pass at you. It could prove to be embarrassing.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Even if you don't have any current plans to use them, your pragmatic skills will be more pronounced than your artistic ones. Put them to work for you if you can.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. It's important to follow through on any promises you made to another, even if it now causes you a bit of inconvenience. Doing so will greatly enhance your reputation.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. If you are penny-wise and pound foolish, don't be surprised if you discover a lot of holes in your books when it comes time to take stock.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Unless you are materially motivated, it isn't likely that you'll use the full force of your talents. However, you'll shift into full gear when there is something in it for you.

B's looking for a spark

Bruins must find way to beat Holtby in Game 3 tonight • Can Pouliot stay hot on third line • Backstrom looking healthy again a scary thing for B's • Can't fully rely on Thomas

A week ago, even the most pessimistic Bruins backer would not have uttered the following: "The B's must figure out a way to solve Braden Holtby."

The Capitals goaltender has allowed just two goals in six periods and three extra sessions as Washington has suddenly become a defensive-minded squad.

Three things to look for as the Bruins play their first postseason road game of the 2012 playoffs tonight in D.C. (7:30, NESN):

Limit Backstrom

Nicklas Backstrom was the most active player on the ice Saturday afternoon as he not only netted the game-winner on a wrister, he also mixed it up with Patrice Bergeron and Tim Thomas. The Caps center was playing just his fifth game back after missing 40 games because of a concussion. Just two years ago, Backstrom was a 100-point scorer in the league. It's scary for Bruins fans to think that he has room for improvement on the offensive end in this series.

Need for a breakout game

Judging by the scores alone, it's obvious that the Bruins offense is struggling. But it can't all be that Holtby is just hot.

The B's offense deserves plenty of the blame here, particularly Tyler Seguin, who was expected to step up in his second NHL postseason. Seguin went largely unnoticed in Saturday's game despite playing 26 minutes. Bergeron has also struggled and has surprisingly lost his fair share of faceoffs in the series.

Feed Pouliot

A year ago at this time, Bruins play-by-play man Jack Edwards was roasting Benoit Pouliot for leaving his feet in an attempt to drill Johnny Boychuk. This April, things are drastically different as Pouliot has been one of the early surprises of the 2012 postseason. He had an assist in Game 1 and a thrilling goal in Game 2. The left wing has a chance to lay down a legacy in Boston if he can become a postseason hero. The foundation for such a thing is there.

Sox seeking sweep of Tampa Bay

Tampa Bay's James Shields is matched up against the Red Sox's Daniel Bard on the mound this morning as the Sox look to take all four games of the series with their AL East rival.

David Ortiz brought the offense in Boston's 6-4 victory over the Rays on Sunday. The DH went 3-for-4 and bashed a go-ahead double off the center field wall in the bottom of the sixth.

New Red Sox outfielder Cody Ross got things started for Boston in the second inning as he clocked a three-run homer over the wall in left. Felix Doubront pitched well but it was Vincente Padilla who got the win. METRO/MB

No Big 3, no matter

◗ Red hot Celtics give Garnett, Pierce the night off, still win ◗ Take two of three in brutal weekend road set ◗ Rondo on fire

Three things we learned over the weekend:

What's up with Ray?
We've seen this from the Celtics on numerous occasions (Shaquille O'Neal, anyone?). They tell you one thing about an injury, and it's actually more serious than what they say. That seems to be the case again, this time with Ray Allen. The C's sharpshooter has been nagged by an ankle injury since slipping on the court against the L.A. Clippers at the start of their West Coast trip in March. Allen missed all three games of the three-in-three-days stretch, and is questionable for the Knicks game on Tuesday.

Two outta three ain't bad
OK, so the three games came against the Raptors, Nets, and Bobcats — three bottom feeders in the NBA. Even so, to play three games in three nights is quite the toll on aging players — as seen by the fact that Paul Pierce and Kevin Garnett sat out the third game mostly for rest reasons (Pierce has a minor foot issue). After an ugly loss on Friday to the Raptors, the C's bounced back nicely on Saturday and Sunday. Without the Big Three, they still managed to beat the Bobcats behind Rajon Rondo (20 points, 15 assists) and Avery Bradley (22 points).

Down the stretch
What looked to be a grueling end-of-season schedule for the currently No. 4 seeded Celtics may not end too badly. The Knicks, who host the C's on Tuesday, are banged up without the likes of Jeremy Lin and Amare Stoudemire. The next night, the C's will host the Dwight Howard-less Magic, currently holding down the No. 6 spot in the Eastern Conference.
